THE great Approbation, with which so polite a nation as France has received the Satyrical and Burlesque Dictionary of Monsieur Le Roux, testified by the several editions it has gone through, will, it is hoped, apologise for an attempt to compile an English Dictionary on a similar plan, our language being at least as copious as the French, and as capable of the witty equivoque, besides which, the freedom of thought and speech, arising from, and privileged by our constitution, gives a force and poignancy to the expressions of our common people, not to be found under arbitrary governments, where the ebullitions of vulgar wit are checked by the fear of the bastinado, or of a lodging during pleasure in some gaol or castle.

The many vulgar allusions and cant expressions that so frequently occur in our common conversation and periodical publications, make a work of this kind extremely useful, if not absolutely necessary, not only to foreigners, but even to natives resident at a distance from the metropolis, or who do not mix in the busy world; without some such help, they might hunt through all the ordinary Dictionaries, from Alpha to Omega, in search of the words, "black legs, lame duck, a plumb, malingeror, nip cheese, darbies, and the new drop," although these are all terms of well-known import, at New-market, Exchange-alley, the City, the Parade, Wapping, and Newgate. The fashionable words, or favourite expressions of the day, also find their way into our political and theatrical compositions; these, as they generally originate from some trifling event, or temporary circumstance, on falling into disuse, or being superseded by new ones, vanish without leaving a trace behind, such were the late fashionable words, a Bore and a Twaddle, among the great vulgar, Maccaroni and the Barber, among the small; these too are here carefully registered.

The Vulgar Tongue consists of two parts:
the first is the Cant Language, called sometimes

times Pedlar's French, or St. Giles's Greek ; the second, those Burlesque Phrases, Quaint Allusions, and Nick-names for persons, things and places, which from long uninterrupted usage are made classical by prescription. Respecting the first, that is, the canting language, take the account given of it's origin and the catastrophe of it's institutor, from Mr. Harrison's Description of England prefixed to Hollinghead's Chronicle ; where, treating of beggars, gypsies, &c. he says, " It is not yet fifty " years sith this trade began, but how it hath " prospered sithens that time, it is easy to
" judge, for they are now supposed of one sexe
" and another to amount unto above ten thousand
" persons, as I have harde reported, more-
" over in counterfeiting the Egyptian roges,
" they have devised a language among themselves,
" which they name canting ; but others
" Pedlar's French, a speache compact
" thirty yeares since of English, and a great " number of odde wordes of their own devising
" without all order or reason, and yet
" such it is, as none but themselves are able " to understand. The first deviser thereof was " hanged by the neck, as a just reward no
" doubt for his desertes, and a common end
" to all of that profession ; a gentleman, (Mr.
" Thomas Harman) also of late hath taken b " great

“ great paines to search out the secret practices of this ungracious rabble, and among other things he setteth down and describeth twenty-two sorts of them, whose names it shall not be amisse to remember, whereby each one may gather what wicked people they are, and what villany remaineth in them.” For this list see the word Crew. This was the origin of the cant language, its terms have been collected from the following Treatises :

The Bellman of London, bringing to light the most notorious villanies that are now practised in the kingdom. Profitable for gentlemen, lawyers, merchants, citizens, farmers, masters of households, and all sorts of servants, to marke, and delightfull for men to reade.—Lege, Perlege, Relege.—1608.

Thieves falling out, true men come by their goods. — 1615.

English Villainies, seven severall times prest to death by the printers ; but (still reviving againe) are now the eighth time (as the first) discovered by lanthorne and candle-light ; and the helpe of a new cryer, called O-per-se O : Whose loud voyce proclaimes to all that will heare

heare him, another conspiracy of abuses lately plotting together, to hurt the peace of the kingdom; which the bell-man (because he ther went stumbling i'th' dark) could never see, till now. And because a company of rogues, cunning canting gypsies, and all the scumme of our nation, fight under their tattered colours. At the end is a canting dictionary to teach their language with canting songs. A booke to make gentlemen merry, citizens warie, countrymen carefull. Fit for justices to reade over, because it is a pilot by whom they may make strange discoveries.—London 1638.

Bailey's, and the new canting dictionary, have also been consulted, with the History of Bamfield More Carew, the Sessions Papers, and other modern authorities; as many of these terms are still professionally used by our present race of free-booters of different denominations, who seem to have established a systematical manner of carrying on their business; a knowledge of them may therefore be useful to gentlemen in the commission of the peace.

The second part or burlesque terms, have been drawn from the most classical authorities; such as soldiers on the long march, seamen at the cap-stern, ladies disposing of their fish, and the colloquies of a Gravesend-boat ; many heroic sentences, expressing and inculcating a contempt of death, have been caught from the mouths of the applauding populace, attending those triumphant processions up Holborn-hill, with which many an unfortunate hero, till lately finished his course, and various choice flowers have been collected at executions, as well those authorized by the sentence of the law, and performed under the direction of the sheriff, as those inflicted under the authority and inspection of that impartial and summary tribunal, called the Mob, upon the pick-pockets, informers, or other unpopular criminals.

In the course of this work many ludicrous games and customs are explained, which are not to be met with in any other book : the succession of the finishers of the law, the abolition of the triumph or ovation of Holborn-hill, with the introduction of the present mode of execution at Newgate, are chronologically ascertained ; points of great importance to both the present and future compilers of the Tyburne Chronicle.

To prevent any charge of immorality being brought against this work, the Editor begs leave to observe, that when an indelicate or immodest word word has obtruded itself for explanation, he has endeavoured to get rid of it in the most decent manner possible; and none have been admitted but such, as either could not be left out, without rendering the work incomplete, or, in some measure, compensate by their wit, for the trespass committed on decorum. Indeed respecting this matter, he can with great truth make the same defence that Falstaff ludicrously urges in behalf of one engaged in rebellion, viz. that he did not seek them, but that, like rebellion in the case instanced, they lay in his way, and he found them.

The Editor likewise begs leave to add, that if he has had the misfortune to run foul of the dignity of any body of men, profession, or trade, it is totally contrary to his intention; and he hopes the interpretations given to any particular terms that may seem to bear hard upon them, will not be considered as his sentiments, but as the sentiments of the persons by whom such terms were first invented, or those by whom they are used.

ABBESS, LADY ABBESS, a Bawd, or the Mistress of a Brothel. One of the greatest adepts in this profession in the last century, was Mrs. Creswell. This infamous woman was, from the natural effects of prostitution in her youth, far advanced in the decline, before she arrived to the meridian of her life. Her great experience in her former occupation qualified her for a procuress, and she soon became an adept in all the diabolical arts of seduction; she lived in town in the winter, and sometimes retired into the country, where she provided convenient lodgings for her customers, some of whom whom were persons of distinction. Though she appeared in her real character in the stews, she could assume a very decent behaviour on proper occasions, and frequently decoyed young unsuspecting girls to London, in hopes of preferment; she kept a very extensive correspondence, and was by her spies and emissaries informed of the rising beauties, in different parts of the kingdom. The trade which she possessed, was, perhaps, carried to a greater height at this period, than at any other. This is plainly hinted by a man of wit and pleasure, who sometimes dealt with her.

To an exact perfection have they brought

Mother Rofs and Mother Bennett (these flourished at this time), to whom the Plain Dealer is dedicated; which is an admirable piece of raillery on women of this description.

Mother Mosely was a bawd of the same period. Betty Beaulieu, a bawd of Scotland Yard, is celebrated by Wood, who says, that Charles Maurice Tellier, Archbishop and Duke of Rheims and Crequi, who came here concerning the marriage of the Dauphin to the lady Mary, visited the house of this mother strumpet. Of these matrons we have no portraits, nor of Mother Needham, Mother Rawlins of Deptford, Mother Douglass, Mother Eastmead, Mother Phillips, and Mother W - - - r. Mr. Tyson, however, has preserved the likeness of Mother Lagden, of Bourn-bridge, in Cambridgeshire.

The most famous places in London, for the resort of women who carried on this vocation, formerly was Moorfields, Whetstone Park, Lukener Lane, and Dog and Bitch Yard. But as every thing has its day, and decline, so these seraglio's now are no more in vogue: and are changed to King's Place, Mary le Bone, and St. George's Fields.

A CAPTAIN of BANDITTS.

Painted by J. C. Street, Esq.,

B A N

BANDITTI, a herd or assembly of Robbers, who generally elect a leader, which they style Captain: Salvator Rosa, and other eminent artists have been famous in representing with their pencil, groups of these marauders. Amongst the most famous assemblies of thieves in this country, who robbed in concert, were Sir John Falstaff and his associates; who flourished in the time of Henry IV. and V. He was born at Potten, in Bedfordshire; his character is admirably drawn by Shakespeare. The names of his associates were Poins, Bardolph, Gadshill, and Peto; Prince Harry occasionally kept him company; in one of his conversations, Falstaff requests that Prince Henry, when he comes to be King, would style them Diana's Foresters, Gentlemen of the Shade, and Minions of the Moon, under whose countenance we steal. He then exclaims, "Prithee, sweet wag, when thou come to be King, let not a gallows stand in England; do not thou hang a thief."

Sir John falls into a strain of repentance, and tells the Prince he has corrupted him, but hopes God would forgive him for it. The Prince immediately proposes to go and take a purse, Sir John answers, "Where thou wilt, lad." The Prince observes, that it is a good amendment from praying to purse-taking. Sir John rejoins, "'Tis my vocation, and it is no sin for a man to labour in his vocation."

Poins was the bravest of all the gang next the Prince; understanding there were pilgrims going to Thomas of Becket's tomb at Canterbury, with rich presents; and at the same time, there were several wealthy tradesmen riding to London, he agreed with his highness, that Falstaff, Harvey, Rossil, and Gadshill (so called from the place where he used to rob) should do this business, and that Poins and the Prince should rob the robbers in disguise: these two heroes fell on them as they were dividing the prey, put them all to flight, went off undiscovered, and sufficiently pleased. After this, Falstaff and his party met the Prince and Poins, at the Boar's

B A N

Boar's head in East-cheap. The Knight began as usual, exclaiming against all cowards, and that good manhood was forgot on the face of the earth. "There lives," says he, "not three good men unchanged in England, and one of them, (meaning himself) is fat and grown old." The Prince asking the occasion of this declaration. "Why," Sir John replies, "that four of us have taken a thousand pounds this morning, but a full hundred fell on us, and took it away again. I am a rogue, if I was not a half sword with a dozen of them two hours together; I have escaped by a miracle; I am eight times thrust through the doublet, four through the hose, my buckles cut through and through, my sword hacked like an hand saw; here, look at it; I never dealt better since I was a man; all would not do." On this the Prince and Poinc burst into a laugh, and told them the whole. Many are the adventures of this gang; but as we have not room to detail them, we will dismiss this company, and take up Robin Hood, Little John, Will Stutely and their associates. The first of these heroes was born in the reign of Henry II. and bred up a butcher, but being of a licentious, wicked disposition, left his trade, and associating himself with several robbers and outlaws, put himself at their head; he was a man of extraordinary courage, and would never entertain any in his fraternity, but such as had been sufficiently tried both in stoutness and dexterity. Will Jones, Jack Barber, and Co. highwaymen, gamblers, and murderers, flourished 1680, and were hung in 1692, for robbing Mrs. Salter, of Stoke, in Buckinghamshire.

Christopher Dickson, John Gibson, and Charles Weymouth, footpads, highwaymen, house-robbers, and ox-killers, were hanged at Tyburn, March 1713.

Jack Colleys, Kit More, and Daniel Hughes, footpads, house-breakers and highwaymen, hanged 1714.

Jack Cullum, Tony Gery and Co. house-breakers, private thieves, and street robbers. Gery was a Berkshire man,

In the time of Pope Sextus V. the ecclesiastical state was so infested with banditti, that nobody's estate or life was in safety. It is hardly possible to conceive the prodigious quantity of robberies and murders that were daily committed; they were come to that pitch, that parties of them would go and lodge publicly in towns, and, on their leaving, take away whatever they chose. But on Sextus's coming to the Papedom, he was determined to rid the state of these vermin, and to establish safety and tranquillity amongst his subjects. He established a tribune, consisting of three judges, men of rigid and inflexible tempers, of great industry and application to business, and skilful in military affairs; appointing them a body of five hundred archers to assist them, with a liberty to encrease them, if they thought necessary, styling them Inquisitors General, against the banditti.

They offered any one of the banditti, who, stung with the remorse of his conscience, and willing to make some recompence to the community, would deliver up any of his companions to justice, 500 crowns if alive, and 300 if dead; dead; and to provide a person so doing, an honest employment suitable to his birth.

These and other regulations, followed up in the severest manner, made all the banditti either be taken, or change their course of life, and become useful subjects: and such a terror was struck into the people, that many, who had particular quarrels for years, made up the difference, for fear the Pope's Inquisitors should construe them as disturbers of the public peace.

Differences, that had lasted for many years, and on which families had committed, by means of the banditti, many tragical murders, were now composed in an instant, and all parties lived in perfect amity and peace.

On Christmas eve, the Pope went incog. to St. Peter's, to celebrate mass; immediately on his getting out of the sedan chair, a woman stepped forward, throwing herself at his feet, crying, "Justice, holy father, justice, I beseech you; cause my poor daughter, who has been carried off by violence two hours ago, to be restored;" the agony she seemed in, so moved his holiness, that he sent directly for the governor, and said to him, "We are going to pay our devoirs to God; go you and pay yours to justice; enquire into this affair, and let me have an account before day-light."

The governor learned from her examination, the woman was the widow of a captain, by whom she had a beautiful daughter; that one Pignoni, son of a Neapolitan gentleman, had, with assistance, carried her off; by knocking at the door, to get a candle lighted, he obtained admission into the house. They were apprehended the next day, and executed. The house, where the rape was committed, was demolished, and the owner paid for it, out of the city chamber.

C O U

COURTESAN, a term of infamy, applied to women who expose their bodies to prostitution, and make a trade or profession of it.

Laias, the famous Theban courtesan, stands on record for requiring no less than ten thousand crowns for a single night. Of all places in the world, Venice is where courtesans abound the most. It is now 200 years ago since they were expelled by the senate; but they were obliged to recal them for the security of the female honour, and to keep the nobles employed, lest they should become virtuous, and turn their attention towards altering the government.

The courtesans of England are many of them courteous, affable, and elegant in their manners. There are instances of their becoming exemplary and virtuous, marrying worthy and noble persons, and raising themselves by their conduct even to a coronet. London is said to contain 50,000 prostitutes, without reckoning those that carry on trade in a private manner, or are kept mistresses. The most wretched of these unfortunate girls live with matrons, who lodge, board and clothe them; of this class, some frequently escape with their wardrobe under their arms, and set up trade on their own bottoms. The uncertainty of receiving payments, makes the housekeeper charge them exorbitantly for their lodgings; they hire by the week a first floor, and pay for it more than the owner gives for the whole house, taxes included; at these lodgings they receive visitors, and are generally furnished.

If a gentleman picks up a lady, and accompanies her to a reputable brothel, the house fees all is safe; and before the frail fair departs in the morning, she retires into a room, while the groom of the chambers attends her paramour, to know whether all is safe, meaning money, watch, &c. This is conducted with the utmost regularity, though there were property to any amount.

Others carry on trade under the direction of a matron, with as much form and regularity as a monastery. Among the most

most proficient courtesans of the last century, was Mary Carleton. This woman, who had more alias's to her name than any rogue in the kingdom, was the daughter of a musician, at Canterbury. Her first husband was a shoemaker of that city, from whom she eloped after four years cohabitation. In a year or two after her elopement, she married one Day, a surgeon, whom she soon forsook, and went into France and Germany; where she learnt the language of those countries, and robbed and cheated several persons. Soon after her return to England, she was married to John Carleton, the son of a citizen in London, who pretended to be a nobleman.

This man, as well as many others, is said to have taken her for a German Princess; or, at least a woman of quality. She was soon after tried at the Old Bailey, for bigamy, and acquitted. Upon this she published an artful vindication of herself, to which was prefixed her portrait. She was afterwards an actress* in one of the theatres. The rest of her life is a continued course of theft, robbery, and imposture; in which, as she had a quick invention, great cunning, and an insinuating address, she was perhaps never exceeded.—If Mary Carleton had actually been a princess, she had parts sufficient to have thrown a kingdom into confusion; and might have made as much mischief as Catherine de Medicis did in France, or Henrietta Maria did in England. She was executed in 1672.

* She appeared for a short time upon the Duke's Theatre, in Dorset Garden, and once performed in a play after her own name, The German Princess; there was a great concourse of people to behold her, yet she did not perform so well as was expected; but there were great applauses bestowed upon her. Every new thing being, as they say, but nine days wonder, hers was not to last many years; although it was just nine years, from her thus first acting on the stage, to her last acting at the gallows. She carried a small picture of her husband, Carleton, pinned on her sleeve, to Tyburn, and put it in her bosom. When she was going to be turned off, she requested it might be buried with her; which was complied with accordingly, at St. Martin's in the Fields.

CRIBBAGE FACED, marked with the small pox, the pits bearing bearing a kind of resemblance to the holes in a cribbage board.

CRIBBEYS, or CRIBBY ISLANDS, blind allies, courts, or bye ways; perhaps from the houses built there being cribbed out of the common way or passage; and islands, from the similarity of sound to the Caribbee Islands.

CRIM. CON. MONEY, damages directed by a jury to be paid by a convicted adulterer, to the injured husband, for criminal conversation with his wife.

CRIMP, a broker or factor; as a coal crimp, who disposes of the cargoes of the Newcastle coal ships; also persons employed to trapan or kidnap recruits for the East Indian and African companies. To crimp or play crimp; to play foul or booty; also a cruel manner of cutting up fish alive, practised by the London fishmongers, in order to make it eat firm, cod and other crimped fish being a favourite dish among voluptuaries and epicures.

CRINKUMS, the foul or venereal disease.

CRIPPLE, six pence, that piece being commonly much bent and distorted.

CRISPIN, a shoe maker, from a romance, wherein a prince of that name is said to have exercised the art and mystery of a shoe maker, thence called the gentle craft; or rather from the saints Crispinus and Crispianus, who, according to the legend, were brethren born at Rome, from whence they travelled to Soissons in France, about the year 303, to propagate the Christian religion, but because they would not be chargeable to others for their maintenance, they exercised the trade of shoe makers; the governor of the town discovering them to be Christians, ordered them to be beheaded about the year 303, from which time they have been the tutelar saints of the shoe makers.

CRISPIN'S HOLIDAY, every monday throughout the year, but

but most particularly the 25th of October, being the anniversary of Crispinus and Crispianus.

ST. CRISPIN'S LANCE, an awl.

CROOK BACK, six-pence. For the reason of this name see cripple.

CROAKUMSHIRE, Northumberland, from the particular croaking in the pronunciation of the people of that county, especially about Newcastle and Morpeth, where they are said to be born with a burr in their throats, which prevents their pronouncing the letter R.

CROCKERS, forestallers, called also kidders and transters.

CROCUS, or CROCUS METALLORUM, a nick name for the surgeons of the army and navy.

CROKER, a groat, or four pence.

CRONY, an intimate companion, a camarade, also a confederate in a robbery.

CROSS PATCH, a peevish boy or girl.

CROSS, to come home by weeping crofs; to repent at the conclusion.

To CROW, to brag, boast, or triumph. To crow over any one; to keep him in subjection, image drawn from a cock, who crows over a vanquished enemy. To pluck a crow; to reprove any one for a fault committed, to settle a dispute. To strut like a crow in a gutter; to walk proudly, or with an air of consequence.

G

CROWD,

C U B

CROWD, a fiddle ; probably from crooth, the Welch name for that instrument.

CROWDERO, a fidler.

CROWDY, oatmeal and water, or milk, a mess much eaten in the north.

CROWE FAIR, a visitation of the clergy. See review of the black cuirassers.

CROWN OFFICE, the head.

CRUISERS, beggars, or highway spies, who traverse the road, to give intelligence of a booty : also rogues ready to snap up any booty that may offer, like privateers or pirates on a cruise.

CRUMP, one who helps solicitors to affidavit men, or false witnesses. I wish you had, Mrs. Crump, a Gloucestershire saying, in answer to a wish for any thing ; implying you must not expect any assistance from the speaker. It is said to have originated from the following incident : One Mrs. Crump, the wife of a substantial farmer, dining with the old Lady Coventry, who was extremely deaf ; said to one of the footmen, waiting at table, I wish I had a draught of small beer, her modesty not permitting her to desire so fine a gentleman to bring it ; the fellow conscious that his mistress could not hear either the request, or answer, replied without moving, I wish you had, Mrs. Crump : these wishes being again repeated by both parties, Mrs. Crump got up from the table to fetch it herself, and being asked by my Lady where she was going, related what had passed : the story being told abroad, the expression became proverbial.

CRUMP BACKED, hump backed.

CRUSTY BEAU, one that uses paint and cosmetics, to obtain a fine complexion.

CRUSTY FELLOW, a surly fellow.

CUB, an unlicked cub ; an unformed, ill educated young man, a young nobleman, or gentleman on his travels ; an allusion allusion to the story of the bear, said to bring its cub into form, by licking; also a new gamester.

CUCUMBERS, taylors who are jocularly said to subsist during the summer, chiefly on cucumbers.

CUCKOLD, the husband of an incontinent wife. Cuckolds are however christians, as we learn by the following story.

An old woman hearing a man call his dog, cuckold, reproved him sharply, saying, firrah, are not you ashamed to call a dog by a christian's name.

CUFF, an old cuff; an old man. To cuff Jonas, said of one who is knock kneed, or who beats his sides to keep himself warm in frosty weather; called also beating the booby.

CUFFIN, a man.

CULL, a man, honest or otherways; (cant) A bob cull, a good natured quiet fellow.

CULLY, a fop or fool, also a dupe to women.

CULLABILITY, a disposition liable to be cheated, an unsuspecting nature, open to imposition.

CULP, a kick or a blow.

CUNDUM, the dried gut of a sheep, worn by men in the act of coition, to prevent venereal infection, said to have been invented by one Colonel Cundum. These machines were long prepared, and sold by a matron of the name of Philips, at the green canister in Half-moon-street, in the Strand. That good lady having acquired a fortune, retired from business; but learning that the town was not well served by her successors, out of a patriotick zeal for the public welfare, returned to her occupation, of which she gave notice, by diverse hand bills, in circulation in the year 1776.

CUNNY THUMB'D, to double one's fist with the thumb inwards, like a woman.

CUNNING SHAVER, a sharp fellow, one that trims close, i. e. cheats ingeniously.

C U R

CUPBOARD LOVE, pretended love to the cook, or any other person, for the sake of a meal.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM, a punning appellation for a simple fellow.

CUP SHOT, drunk.

CUP OF THE CREATURE, a cup of good liquor.

CUPID, BLIND CUPID, a jeering name for an ugly blind man : Cupid the god of love being frequently painted blind.

CURBING LAW, to hook goods out of windows, (cant) the curber is the thief, the curb the hook.

CUR, a cut or curtailed dog. According to the forrest laws, a man who had no right to the privilege of the chase, was obliged to cut or law his dog ; among other modes of disabling him from disturbing the game, one was by depriving him of his tail, a dog so cut was called a cut or curtailed dog, and by contraction a cur. A cur is figuratively used to signify a surly fellow.

CURLE, clippings of money, which curls up in the operation. (cant)

CURRY, to curry favour, to obtain the favour of a person by coaxing, or servility ; to curry any one's hide, to beat him.

CURSE OF SCOTLAND, the nine of diamonds. Diamonds, it is said, imply royalty, being ornaments to the imperial crown, and every ninth king of Scotland, has been observed for many ages, to be a tyrant and a curse to that country.

CURSITORS, broken pettyfogging attornies, or Newgate sollicitors. (cant)

CURTAILS, thieves who cut off pieces of stuff hanging out of shop windows, the tails of women's gowns, &c. also thieves wearing short jackets.

CURTAIN LECTURE, a woman who scolds her husband when in bed, is said to read him a curtain lecture.

D A I

CURMUDGEON, a covetous old fellow, derived according to some, from the French term cœur méchant.

CURTEZAN, a prostitute.

CUSHION, he has deserved the cushion, a saying of one whose wife is brought to bed of a boy, implying that having done his business effectually, he may now indulge or repose himself.

CUT, drunk; a little cut over the head, slightly intoxicated; to cut, to leave a person or company; to cut up well, to die rich.

TO CUT BENE, to speak gently, (cant) To cut bene whiddes, to give good words; to cut queer whiddes, to give foul language.

D.

D A I

DAB, an adept; a dab at any feat or exercise; dab, quoth Dawkins, when he hit his wife on the a—se with a pound of butter.

DACE, two pence; (cant) tip me a dace, lend me two-pence.

DADDLES, hands; (cant) tip us your daddle, give me your hand.

DAISY CUTTER, a jockey term for a horse, that does not lift up his legs sufficiently, or goes too near the ground, and is therefore apt to stumble.

DAISY KICKERS, hostlers at great inns.

DAL-

D A V

DALMAHOY, a Dalmahoy wig, a particular kind of bushy bob wig, first worn by a chymist of that name, and afterwards adopted by tradesmen, apothecaries, &c.

DAMBER, a rascal. See dimber.

DAMME BOY, a roaring, mad blustering fellow, a scourer of the streets, or kicker up of a breeze.

DAM, a small Indian coin, mentioned in the Gentoo code of laws, hence etymologists may, if they please, derive the common expression, I do not care a dam, i. e. I do not care half a farthing for it.

DAMPER, a luncheon, or snap before dinner, so called from its damping, or allaying the appetite; eating and drinking being, as the proverb wisely observes, apt to take away the appetite.

DANCERS, stairs.

DANDY PRAT, an insignificant, or trifling fellow.

DANDY GREY RUSSET, a dirty brown.

DANGLE, to dangle, to follow a woman without asking the question.

DANGLER, one who follows women in general, without any particular attachment, also to be hanged; I shall see you dangle in the sheriff's picture frame, I shall see you hanging on the gallows.

DAPPER FELLOW, a smart well made little man,

DARBY, ready money, (cant)

DARBIES, fetters, (cant)

DARKMANS, the night, (cant)

DARKMAN'S BUDGE, one that slides into a house in the dark of the evening, and hides himself, in order to let some of the gang in at night to rob it.

DARK CULLY, a married man that keeps a mistress, whom he visits only at night, for fear of discovery.

DASH, a tavern drawer; to cut a dash, to make a figure.

DAVID JONES, the devil, the spirit of the sea, called Neken.

DAMNABLE, MOTHER DAMNABLE. Of this shrew; thus denominated, whose real name has not reached posterity, nothing farther is known than the following lines annexed to her portrait—London, printed in the year 1676—informs us; of which an unique impression, as it is supposed to be, is in the possession of J. Bindley, esq.

M O T H E R D A M N A B L E .

Y'HAVE often seen (from Oxford tipling-house)
Th' effigies of Shipton fac'd Mother Louse,
Whose petty pranks, (though some they might excel)
With this old trot's ne'er gallop'd parallel.
'Tis Mother Damnable! that monstrous thing,
Unmatch'd by Macbeth's wayward women's ring,
For cursing, scolding, fuming, flinging fire
I'th face of madam, lord, knight, gent, cit, squire;
Who (when but ruffled into the least pet)
Will cellar door key into pocket get.
Then no more ale; and now the fray begins!
'Ware heads, wigs, hoods, scarfs, shoulders, sides, and shins!
While these dry'd bones, in a Westphalian bag,
(Through th' wrin'd weasand of her shapeless crag)
Send forth such dismal shrieks, and uncouth noise,
As fill the town with din, the street with boys;
Which makes some think, this fierce she-dragon, fell,
Can scarce be match'd by any this side hell.
So fam'd, both far and near, is the renown
Of Mother Damnable, of Kentish Town.
Wherefore this symbol of the cats we'll give her,
Because, so curst, a dog would not dwell with her.

London, printed 1676.

It perhaps may not be unreasonable to conjecture that the heroine of the above verses was the original Mother Red Cap, and kept the public house known by that name at Kentish Town for a century past, by the sign of her head. Her rival val was Mother Black Cap, which two dwellings were the only houses on that spot ; it is lately covered by an immense pile of buildings. Others of the learned dispute that Mother Damnable ever lived at Kentish Town ; and assert, by traditionary evidence, that she resided at Pimlico, at the entrance of the five fields, leading to Chelsea ; the word damnable is illustrated in the pretended probationary ode, intended to pourtray the bluntness of a late Chancellor, who made use of many oaths in his common communications ; it begins thus,

“ Damnation seize you all.”

Other characters, not so profane, adopt the word “ Dang-it.” This word is happily illustrated by a contemptible impudent bookfeller of the present day, who lies about twenty times in an hour, and says at every assertion, God dang-it, it is true. While we are on this chapter of odd characters, I shall comment on that entertaining book, Mr. Granger’s Biographical History, who, in his twelfth class, puts in those persons, who were remarkable for one circumstance in their lives. I shall also make use of those amusing memoirs, by Mr. James Caulfield, who begins his work with an account of Matthew Hopkins, who was witch-finder to the associated counties, who hanged in one year sixty supposed witches ; he was executed as a wizard : he flourished from 1640 to the restoration.

Joseph Clark, of Pall-Mall, posture-master, who exhibited, by the flexibility of his limbs, and the disposition of his features, every species of deformity, though a well made man naturally. He died about 1691.

Jack Adams ; Adams the professor of celestial science, at Clerkenwell-green ; who, when he failed in his predictions, declared the stars did not absolutely force, but powerfully incline : he flourished about 1670.

traced over, besides seas and rivers, 36,000 miles: he flourished in the time of James I.

Phillips, the merry andrew. This zany was regularly bred, an advantage that few of his brethren possessed. The origin of farce has been attributed to the entertainments between Punch and the filler, and other exhibitions by buffoons in the street. Hans Buling, a Dutchman, who practised as a mountebank, flourished in the time of Charles II. Hugh Massey a fidler, about the same time, played about the streets of London. Within these last forty years, there was an old woman, who played and sung very prettily, about this great town, and was called by the people, the musical old woman. Rigepe Dandulo, a Turk, who was converted to christianity, baptized at Exeter-house, 1657.

John Evans, an astrologer, called the ill-favoured astrologer of Wales. This fellow was more knave than fool. Mr. Caulfield's book says, his countenance was scarcely human: he gave judgment of things lost: he was of a middle stature, broad forehead, beetle-browed, thick shouldered, flat nosed, and full lips down looked, black curling stiff hair, and splay-footed. He was addicted to debauchery, very quarrelsome, and seldom without a black eye. Lilly the astrologer was his pupil: he flourished in the time of James I. Richard Dugdale, the Sarry impostor, in 1688, at a merry meeting, offered himself to the devil, on condition of becoming an expert dancer; after which, he was troubled with strange fits, dancing in an uncommon manner on his knees. Simon Foreman, a fellow-labourer in the vineyard of knavery: he flourished in the time of Queen Elizabeth; and till the popish business of Sir Thomas Overbury's time, James I. he lived at Lambeth, and was charitable to the poor: he foretold his own death.

Henry Jenkins, a Yorkshire man, lived to the extraordinary age of 169 years: he died 1670; his monument is in Polton church-yard.

Colly

DAMNED ODD CHARACTERS.

Colly Molly Puff, the little pye-man, flourished in the time of James II.

Old Parr, a Shropshire man, lived to the immense age of 153, died 1635.

Oliver Cromwell's porter, one of those men commonly termed giants; but in plain English, he was a remarkably tall man, which perhaps was the reason of his being selected as porter to the Protector. He had much religious cant about him.

Mary Davis. This old woman, who had an excrescence like two horns growing out of her head, was described in an old pamphlet, published 1679, with this verse in the title:

You who love wonders to behold,
Here you may of a wonder read;
The strangest that was ever seen, or told,—
A woman bearing horns upon her head.

Old Scarlet, Sexton of Peterborough Cathedral, flourished in the 16th century: his portrait is at the west end of the afore-mentioned church. He buried Catherine of Arragon, and Mary Queen of Scots.

You see old Scarlet's picture stand on hie,
But at your feet, there doth his bodie lie;
His grave-stone doth his age and death-time shewe,
His office, by his tokens, you may know.
Second to none for strength, and sturdye limm,
A scare-babe's mighty voice, with visage grim.
Hee had enterr'd two queens within this place,
And this townes house-holders with his lives space
Twice over: but at length his own turne came,
What he for others did, for him the same
Was done: no doubt his soul doth live, for aye
In heaven; though here his bodics clad in clay.

DAMNED ODD CHARACTERS.

John Kesley, a quaker, who went to Constantinople, for no less a purpose than to convert the grand Signior. On his being brought before Lord Winchelsea, the Ambassador at the Porte, he refused to take off his hat; but a little Turkish drubbing being ordered, he changed his resolution.

William Fuller, cheat-master-general of England, famous for his pretended correspondence with James II. for which he was censured by Parliament, and ordered to be prosecuted; his sentence was to go to all the courts of Westminster with a paper pinned on his hat; to stand three times in the pillory, two hours at a time, on Friday following at Charing-cross; on Saturday, at Temple-bar; and on Monday, at the Royal Exchange; to be whipped in Bridewell, kept to hard labour til the second day of the ensuing term, and be fined a thousand marks. Whatever might be his guilt, his punishments bore more than pace with it.

Hugh Peters, a vehement preacher and declaimer against Charles I. Sir P. Warwick observes, that it is probable, he was one of the masqued executioners of that prince.

James Naylor, a visionary quaker, who assumed the character of the Messiah: he entered triumphantly, as Christ, into Bristol; he affected to heal the sick, and raise the dead: he was pilloried, burnt through the tongue for blasphemy, and branded with a B in the forehead; whipped, and confined to hard labour. This discipline brought him to his senses: he was author of a book, called Milk for Babes. He died 1660, in his 44th year.

Elizabeth Sawyer, a poor little woman, who was executed in the time of James I. for Witchcraft; she lived at Edmonton, a place famous for the pretended scene, on which was founded that strange incoherent story of Elizabeth Canning, and Mary Squires.

John Barefoot, Letter Doctor to the university of Oxford, in the 17th century.

Elinor

DAMNED ODD CHACACTERS.

Elinor Rumin, the famous ale-wife of Leatherhead, in Surry, celebrated by Skelton, flourished in the time of Henry VIII. Under her portrait,

When Skelton wore the laurel crown,
My ale put all the ale-wives down.

William Sommers, King Henry VIIIth's Jester, Robert Catesby, Thomas Percy, Thomas and Robert Winter, Guido Fawkes, John and Christopher Wright, with Bates, servant to Catesby; an infamous fraternity, who were executed in the time of James I. for plotting the blowing up the Parliament with gunpowder.

Archy, jester to James I. and Charles I. and Captain Robert Dover, celebrated for establishing the Cotswold Games, in the time of Charles I.

Hobson, the Cambridge carrier, celebrated by Milton, flourished in the time of Charles I.

Jeffery Hudson, the celebrated dwarf, flourished about the same time, as did Francis Battalia, an Italian soldier, who swallowed stones.

Nat Witt, a poor harmless idiot, was cotemporary with the four last. Likewise John Bull and R. Farnam, two ranting nonsensical preachers.

In the Interregnum, Martha Hatfield, a child of eleven years old, was played off by some designing people, and called the wise virgin. She was afflicted with trances, and the people came far and near, to hear what she had seen in these trances.

Roger Crab, the English hermit, lived at this time: he destroyed himself by eating bran, grass, dock leaves and such other food, comprehended in his plan for living at three farthings a week.

Barbara Urfeline, the hairy woman, lived about 1653. A Dutchman married this frightful creature, on purpose to make money of her as a show.

DAVID JONES'S LOCKER, the sea.

DAWB, to dawb, to bribe; the cull was scragged because he could not dawb, the rogue was hanged because he could not bribe; all bedawbed with lace, all over lace.

DAVY, I'll take my davy of it, vulgar abbreviation of affidavit.

DAVID'S SOW, as drunk as David's sow, a common saying, which took its rise from the following circumstance: one David Lloyd, a Welchman, who kept an alehouse at Hereford, had a living sow with six legs, which was greatly resorted to by the curious; he had also a wife much addicted to drunkenness, for which he used sometimes to give her due correction. One day David's wife having taken a cup too much, and being fearful of the consequences, turned out the sow, and laid down to sleep herself sober, in the sty. A company coming in to see the sow, David ushered them into the sty, exclaiming there is a sow for you! did any of you ever see such another? all the while supposing the sow had really been there; to which some of the company, seeing the state the woman was in, replied it was the drunkenest sow they had ever beheld; whence the woman was ever after called David's sow.

DAY LIGHTS, eyes, to darken one's day lights, or sow up his fees, to close up a man's eyes in boxing.

DEAD MEN, a cant word among journeymen bakers, for loaves falsely charged to their master's customers; also empty bottles.

DEADLY, never green, that bears fruit all the year round, the gallows, or three legged mare. See three legged mare.

DEAD CARGO, a term used by thieves, when they are disappointed in the value of their booty.

D R U

DRUNKENNESS.

The most famous drinkers in modern history, are the Germans, Dutch, and other northern Nations. David Teniers has been happy in portraying with his pencil groups of Dutchmen drinking. The mischiefs of drunkenness consist of the following bad effects. First, it betrays most constitutions into an excess of anger, or sin of lewdness. It disqualifies men for the duties of their station; it is attended with expence and stupefaction; it is sure to cause uneasiness in the family of the drunkard.

Drunkenness, Mr. Paley observes, is a social festive vice; the drinker collects his circle, the circle spreads, till a whole neighbourhood is infected.

The ancient Lacedemonians used to make their slaves drunk to give their children an aversion and horror for the same.

Drunkenness is repeatedly forbidden by St. Paul. Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess. Let us walk honestly in the day, not in rioting and drunkenness.

Be not deceived, neither fornicators nor drunkards. They that are drunken, are drunken in the night, but let us that are of the day be sober.

Drunkenness, by the English law, is looked on not as an excuse, but an aggravation of a crime committed in that state. A drunkard, says Sir Edward Coke, hath no privilege thereby, but what hurt, or ill soever he doth, is an aggravation of his crime. It is observed, that the use and abuse of strong liquors, depend much upon the climate. What would only make a Norwegian's blood flow, would make an Italian mad. Mr. Montesquieu observes, a German drinks through custom, founded on constitutional necessity.

A Spaniard drinks through choice, or in the wantonness of luxury; and drunkenness, he adds, ought to be more severely punished, where it makes men mischievous and mad, as in Spain and Italy, than where it makes them stupid and heavy, as in Germany and the Northern nations.

In

D R U

In the warmer climate of Greece, Pittacus enacted a law, that he who committed a crime when drunk, should receive a double punishment; one, for the crime, the other, for being drunk. The Romans made great allowance for this vice; but the law of England, knowing how easy it is to counterfeit an excuse (though real), will not suffer any man to privilege one crime by another.

For the offence of drunkenness, a man may be punished in the ecclesiastical court, as well as by a Justice of Peace, by a statute law of James I. If any person shall be convicted of this offence, he shall forfeit five shillings for the first offence, or sit in the stocks six hours.

There was a famous character on the town, a few years since, named Dick Hughes, brother to Mrs. Steel.* In one of his drunken fits, he enlisted as a Soldier; when he went to be attested, and being asked by the magistrate how old he was, he answered three days; for no one that was a week old, he observed, could be fool enough to fight for six pence a day. This remarkable character was so active, that he several times climbed over the wall of the King's-Bench prison, and returned back again the same way; he could hop on one leg for two hours, which he did frequently for trifling wagers.

That eccentric nobleman, John, Earl of Rochester, famous for his indecent satires, is said to have been drunk for five years together: he was certainly a man of genius; but it must be acknowledged, the greatest parts of his works are trivial, or detestable: he has had a multitude of readers, and so have all other writers who havefoothed, or fallen in with the passions, or corruptions of mankind.

* This was the woman who published those meretricious memoirs of the celebrated Mrs. Baddeley. The police officers were, some few years since, pursuing her for forgery; she by some means got a stage out of town in disguise, and getting into a post-chaise, ordered the driver to take her to an inn in Bishopsgate-street, where she died in a few days.

Some derive it from the word donnez, which signifies give, but the true original meaning of the word, owes its birth to one Joe Dun, a famous bailiff of the town of Lincoln, so extremely active, and so dexterous in his business, that it became a proverb, when a man refused to pay, why do not you Dun him, that is, why do not you set Dun to arrest him; hence it became a cant word, and is now as old, as since the days of Henry VII. Dun was also the general name for the hangman, before that of jack ketch.

*And presently a halter got,

GYBE, or JYBE, any writing or pass with a seal.

GYBEING, jeering, or ridiculing.

GYPSIES, a set of vagrants, who to the great disgrace of our police, are suffered to wander about the country; they pretend that they derive their origin from the ancient Egyptians, who were famous for their knowledge in astronomy, and other sciences, and under the pretence of fortune telling, find means to rob, or defraud the ignorant and superstitious. To colour their impostures, they artificially discolour their faces, and speak a kind of gibberish peculiar to themselves. They rove up and down the country in great companies, to the great terror of the farmers, from whose geese, turkies, and fowls, they take very considerable contributions.

When a fresh recruit is admitted into the fraternity, he is to take the following oath, administered by the principal maunder, after going through the annexed forms.

First a new name is given him, by which he is ever after to be called, then standing up in the middle of the assembly, and directing his face to the dimber damber, or principal man of the gang, he repeats the following oath, which is dictated to him, by some experienced member of the fraternity :

I Crank Cuffin, do swear to be a true brother, and that I will in all things, obey the commands of the great tawney prince, and keep his counsel, and not divulge the secrets of my brethren.

I will never leave, nor forsake the company, but observe and keep all the times of appointments, either by day, or by night, in every place whatever.

I will

G Y P

I will not teach any one to cant, nor will I disclose any of our mysteries to them.

I will take my prince's part against all that shall oppose him, or any of us, according to the utmost of my ability, nor will I suffer him, or any belonging to us, to be abused by any strange abrams, rufflers, hookers, pailliards, fwadlers, Irish toyles, fwigmen, whip jacks, jark men, bawdy baskets, dommerars, clapper dogeons, patricoes, or curtals, but will defend him, or them, as much as I can, against all other outliers whatever. I will not conceal ought I win out of libkins, or from the ruffmans, but will preserve it for the use of the company. Lastly, I will cleave to my doxy wap stiffly, and will bring her duds, margery praters, gobblers, grunting cheats, or tibs of the buttery, or any thing else I can come at, as winnings for her wappings.

The canters have it seems a tradition, that from the three first articles of this oath, the first founders of a certain boastful, worshipful fraternity, who pretend to derive their origin from the earliest times, borrowed both the hint and form of their establishment. And that their pretended derivation from the first Adam is a forgery, it being only from the first Adam Tiler. See Adam Tiler. At the admission of a new brother, a general stock is raised for booze or drink to make themselves merry on the occasion. As for peckage or eatables, they can procure it without money, for while some are sent to break the ruffmans or woods and bushes, for firing, others are detached to filch geese, chickens, hens, ducks, or mallards, and pigs. Their morts are their butchers, who presently make bloody work with what living things are brought them, and having made holes in the ground under some remote hedge in an obscure place, they make a fire and boil or broil their food; and when 'tis enough, fall to work tooth and nail, and having eaten more like beasts than

than men, they drink more like swine than human creatures, entertaining one another all the time with songs in the canting dialect.

As they live so they lie together promiscuously, and know not how to claim a property, either in their goods or children, and this general interest ties them more firmly together, than if all their rags were twisted into ropes, to bind them indissolubly from a separation, which detestable union is farther consolidated by the above oath.

They stroll up and down all summer time in droves; and dextrously pick pockets, while they are telling of fortunes, and the money, rings, silver thimbles, &c. which they get, are instantly conveyed from one hand to another, till the remotest person of the gang, who is not suspected because they come not near the person robbed, gets possession of it, so that in the strictest search, it is almost impossible to recover it, while the wretches with imprecations, oaths, and protestations, disclaim the thievery. That by which they are said to get the most money, is, when young gentlewomen of good families and reputation have happened to be with child before marriage, a round sum is often bestowed among the gypsies, for some one mort to take the child; and as that is never heard of more by the true mother and family, so the disgrace is kept concealed from the world, and if the child lives it never knows its parents.

HOB, or NOB, will you hob, or nob, with me, a question formerly in fashion at polite tables, signifying a request or challenge to drink a glass of wine with the proposer; if the party challenged answered nob, they were to chuse whether white or red. This foolish custom is said to have originated in the days of good Queen Bess, thus, when great chimnies were in fashion, there was at each corner of the hearth, or grate, a small elevated projection, called the hob, and behind it a seat. In winter time the beer was placed on the hob to warm, and the cold beer was set on a small table, said to have been called the nob, so that the question, will you have hob, or nob, seems only to have meant, will you have warm, or cold beer, i. e. beer from the hob, or beer from the nob.

HOBNAIL, a country clodhopper, from the shoes of country farmers and ploughmen being commonly stuck full of hob nails, and even often clouted, or tipped with iron.

HORN FAIR, an annual fair held at Charlton, in Kent, on St. Luke's day, the 18th of October. It consists of a riotous mob, who after a printed summons dispersed through the adjacent towns, meet at cuckolds point, near Deptford, and march from thence in procession, through that town and Greenwich, to Charlton, with horns of different kinds upon their heads; and at the fair there are sold rams horns, and every sort of toy made of horn, even the gingerbread figures have horns. The vulgar tradition gives the following history of the origin of this fair: King John, or some other of our ancient kings, being at the palace of Eltham, in this neighbourhood, and having been out a hunting one day, rambled from his company to this place, then a mean hamlet; when entering a cottage to enquire his way, he was struck with the beauty of the mistress, whom he found alone, and having prevailed over her modesty, the husband returning suddenly, surprized them together, and threatening to kill them both, the king was obliged to discover himself, and to compound for his safety, by a purse of gold, and a grant of the land, from this place to cuckolds point, besides making the husband master of the hamlet. It is added, that in memory of this grant, and the occasion of it, this fair was established, for the sale of horns, and all sorts of goods made with that material. A sermon is preached at Charlton Church on the fair day.

KETCH, Jack Ketch, a general name for the finishers of the law, or hangmen, ever since the year 1682, when the office was filled by a famous practitioner of that name, of whom his wife said, that any bungler might put a man to death, but only her husband knew how to make a gentleman die sweetly. This officer is mentioned in Butler's Ghost, page 54, published about the year 1682, in the following lines:

*Till Ketch observing he was chous'd,
And in his profits much abus'd,
In open hall the tribute dun'd,
To do his office, or refund.*

Mr. Ketch had not long been elevated to his office, for the name of his predecessor Dun occurs in the former part of this poem, page 29.

*For you yourself to act squire Dun,
Such ignominy ne'er saw the sun.*

The

K I D

The addition of squire, with which Mr. Dun is here dignified, is a mark that he had beheaded some state criminal for high treason, an operation, which, according to custom for time out of mind, has always entitled the operator to that distinction. The predecessor of Dun, was Gregory Brandon, from whom the gallows was called, the Gregorian tree, by which name it is mentioned, in the prologue to Mercurius Pragmaticus, a tragi-comedy acted at Paris, &c. 1641.

*This trembles under the black rod, and he

The most celebrated highwaymen, who have robbed in this country alone, are as follows :

Sir Goffelin D'Enville, a Yorkshire man, educated at St. Peter's College, Cambridge, flourished in the time of Edward II.

Thomas Dun, a Bedfordshire man, committed so many robberies in the time of Henry I. that the town of Dunstable was built to bridle Dun and his associates.

Sawney Cuninghame, a Glasgow man, highwayman, swindler, and murderer, executed at Leith.

Walter Tracey, a Norfolk man, educated at the university, became extravagant, and turned highwayman ; among other robberies, he robbed Ben Johnson and the Duke of Buckingham, and for the last, he was executed at Winchester.

Thomas Witherington flourished in the time of James I. he was executed at Newgate. At the same time flourished James Philpot and Jonathan Woodward, two notorious housebreakers, the scourge of London and Westminster for many years.

Thomas Rumbold, a Suffolk man, robbed the Archbishop of Canterbury of fourteen hundred pounds. His maxim was, to fasten his hair into his mouth, and call out "stand and deliver." He was one of the most early money and ring droppers, in this country. He was executed at Tyburn.

Nehemiah Dixon, a Newcastle man, flourished about the same time.

Thomas Gray, a Winchester man, called the witty rogue : he died before he reached that exit, which his crimes merited.

Captain Stafford, a Berkshire man, who served in the army of Charles I. hanged for robbing a farmer at Reading : he was a man of family and fashion.

Captain James Hind was cotemporary with the last, and a man

a man as much talked of to this day, as any one who ever drove the profession; for he never in his life committed a robbery, but at the same time made some observation that was diverting and pleasant. He robbed Hugh Peters, on Endfield Chace; he robbed the President Bradshaw, near Shaftsbury, and Colonel Harrison (the celebrated regicide), at Maidenhead Thicket: he was drawn, hanged, and quartered for Treason, in Cromwell's time.

Clando Duval flourished in the time of Charles II. He was of Normandy birth.

William Nevinston, a Yorkshire man, flourished in Cromwell's time, and at the restoration: executed at York.

The Golden Farmer, whose name was William Davis, a Welchman: he carried on the farming business as a cloak for his robberies; he robbed the Dutchess of Albemarle, on the Salisbury road. The gallows became the just punishment of all his villainies.

Thomas Wilmot, a gentleman's son in Suffolk; flourished at the time of Charles II. he robbed Mrs. Blood, wife of the famous Colonel Blood; likewise the witty Duke of Buckingham; he was hanged 1670, aged 38.

Isaac Atkinson flourished about the same time, and was famous for robbing lawyers.

William Cady, a gentleman of Norfolk, and student of the university at Cambridge, spent his fortune, and turned highwayman: he was hanged for a most shocking murder, 1687, aged 25.

Nicholas Horner, a Devonshire man, was hanged 1719.

Jacob Halfey, a Bedfordshire man, who generally robbed in the habit of a quaker: he was executed 1691.

Captain Dudley, a great and famous robber, flourished about the same time.

Old Mob was executed 1690.

Captain Zachariah Howard, who possessed an estate of 1400l. a year, taking the loyal side of the question in the reign reign of Charles I. became distressed, and turned highway-man: he ended his life 1651-2.

Major Strangeways, a Dorsetshire gentleman, who served in the armies of Charles I. hanged for the murder of Mr. Fussel, in consequence of a quarrel about a law suit.

William Morell, an Oxfordshire man, born about 1650: he died in his bed, after bequeathing his landlord a very large estate, which was all a cheat.

Tom Jones, a highwayman, executed 1702.

Gilder Roy, a highlander of good family, who kept Peg Cunningham: on her betraying him, as the officers entered the apartments where he was, he ripped up her belly with a knife, and made a most desperate defence against his adversaries: he was executed 1658.

Patrick Fleming, an Irishman, who styled himself Lord of the Road: he robbed in Ireland 125 men and women in a few days. He assembled a numerous gang, of which some were taken from time to time, and executed: he was hanged in chains 1650.

Sawney Douglafs, a cotemporary with Duval. The last attempt of this hero was to rob the great Earl of Sandwich; but his lordship shooting his horse, he was taken by the servants, brought to justice, and executed.

Frank Osborn, a man of genteel family in Essex, flourished about the same time.

Jack Collic, a highwayman and gamester, executed 1691.

Tom Waters committed an immense number of robberies: executed 1691.

Tom Cox, hanged at Tyburn 1691.

Jonathan Simpson, who committed innumerable robberies, executed 1686.

Dick Low, a most famous thief, hanged in 1707. About the same time, Jack Hall suffered.

Joseph Blake (alias Blueskin), a most famous thief. Jonathan Wild, his friend, coming to see him, he made a cut at Jona-

Jonathan's throat ; of which Wild languished a good while, but at last recovered. He was executed 1724.

Jack Shepherd, that prodigy of ingenious wickedness, flourished about this time.

Jonathan Wild, a Staffordshire man, a thief-taker, and thief-maker, who reigned a long while, was executed 1725, aged 42 years.

From Mr. Granger's curious work, we will extract the lives of Colonel Turner, and Clavell, two famous men in their day.

COLONEL JAMES TURNER. This gentleman was born in the city of Worcester, in the year 1609, of very reputable parents, who placed him with a goldsmith of reputation in London, as soon as of years for a trade. With this man he served his apprenticeship very faithfully, and had the character of being a young man well qualified for business. When his father thought proper to put him into trade for himself, he gave him a stock of no less than three thousand pounds, to which he soon added two thousand more by marriage. He had great success in business for some years, and was esteemed the wealthiest man in his neighbourhood, so that his word would have passed for almost any sum.—Mr. Turner had always a considerable inclination for pleasure and company, taking peculiar delight in associating himself with the gentlemen who were officers of the city militia. Among these he was complimented with a captain's commission, then a major's, then a lieutenant-colonel's, and, at last, with the command of one of the regiments ; in which he continued till the unhappy action, that brought him to his end, was discovered, to the surprize of all the world.

The colonel's temper was very generous and noble ; which, it is thought, in some measure brought on him that decay of his fortune, which he afterwards laboured under. In his post, particularly when he marched out with his regiment, he was

was very liberal in his entertainments ; and commonly run himself to four times the expence that was necessary. It was the same on every other occasion ; no man was more free with his money, or more ambitious of living in splendor and reputation, than Colonel Turner. This disposition had with him the same effect, as it commonly has with others, who ruin themselves by their generosity. He had no notion of retrenching his expences, when he perceived his substance waste, but was resolved to support himself with the same pomp as usual, however he came by the money. It was easy for such a man to commit a great many secret actions, that were in themselves dishonourable, before he lost his character, on account of his great business. Several of these things discovered themselves after he was convicted, which even the persons that were wronged did not suspect before. One instance in particular will be well worth relating, and was as follows. He applied himself one day to a merchant, and bought of him as much train oil, and rice, as came to three hundred and sixty pounds ; which he promised to pay for as soon as the goods were delivered. Accordingly, the day after, he went to the merchant's house, and gave him the full sum, in money and notes, for which the merchant wrote a receipt, while it lay on the desk. Two of Turner's accomplices (for he made use of assistants) came just at this time, and pretended some urgent business with the merchant ; and, in short played their part so well, that one of them got off, with the greatest part of Turner's payment, while the other kept the innocent man in discourse : neither of them took any more notice of the colonel, than if they had not known him ; nor did the merchant imagine he had any concern in the matter, till he was found guilty for another crime, of which take this short account. There was one Mr. Francis Tryon, a great merchant, who lived in Lime-street, whom Colonel Turner knew to be very rich : in order to rob this man, one of the aforementioned fellows conveyed conveyed himself into his cellar, in the dusk of the evening ; and as soon as Mr. Tryon was in bed, and, as he thought, asleep, he let the Colonel in at the door : they went up together, to his bed chamber, bound him, gagged him, and used him in a very barbarous manner ; and then, going into his warehouse, they took from thence a large quantity of diamonds, sapphires, rubies, &c. which Turner knew where to find. Then they took all the money in the house, which amounted to a very large sum : so that the whole booty was asserted to be of the value of five thousand nine hundred and forty six pounds, four shillings and three-pence. They made off with all this quietly. Mr. Tryon had a man and a maid servant, but they both lay abroad this night by permission ; of which the Colonel had before received information. Strict enquiry was made after the thieves, and all such jewels as were remarkable were particularly described ; while Turner thought himself secure in his character, which had so long screened him. But some of the things described were seen in his house ; and the discoverers were resolved to examine further. Whereupon the Colonel, his wife, and his three sons, John, William, and Ely, were apprehended ; and, upon search, almost all the jewels were found. There was now no room for evasion. The whole family were carried before Sir Thomas Allen, Knight, and Alderman, and all committed to Newgate. At the next sessions they were all indicted for the said robbery ; but, after a full examination of what evidence they had, and considering what the Colonel himself said in his defence, it was thought proper by the court, to acquit the wife and sons, and to bring the Colonel in guilty.—Whereupon the usual sentence of death was passed upon him, and executed on the 21st of January, 1662-3 ; when he was drawn in a cart from Newgate, to the end of Leadenhall-street, and there hanged on a gibbet erected for that purpose, being fifty-three years old.

We would only observe, that though all who knew him wondered at the fact, yet every one believed him guilty; because the proofs were so clear. There was a robbery in his life-time, which nobody could then find out; but, after his death, it was generally thought he was the manager. A letter was sent to a wealthy dealer at Chichester, signed with the name of a merchant, his acquaintance in London, informing him of a profitable purchase in his way, and inviting him to town. The Chichester man had before received advices of this kind, from the same friend, and found them of service; therefore scrupled not, but set out the next day, with what money and notes he had in the house; but before he got half way to London, he was robbed of all by two men in disguise: he soon found his correspondent had not sent to him, and was astonished. Colonel Turner's death cleared all; he knowing both their circumstances.

JOHN CLAVELL. That robbing on the highway, or any way, should, sometimes, be the consequence of a propensity to poetry, would not be much to be wondered at, as it so frequently entails poverty on its professors; but that robbing on the highway should be productive of poetry, is to be instanced, perhaps, only in the subject of these anecdotes. John Clavell, gentleman, was of a respectable family; nephew, and heir at law to Sir William Clavell, Knight Banneret; and had a liberal education: whether, or not, he was bred to any profession, or employment, that might have kept him from bad company, and pecuniary inconvenience, strong incentives to the commission of such offences, as had nearly brought this singular character to an ignominious end, is unknown ; suffice it to relate, that, in the early part of the reign of King Charles I. he was apprehended for a highway robbery ; on which occasion the following lines, written by himself, were, previous to his trial, presented to the king.

* He desired the minister who attended, to read to him the 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, and 18th verses of the second chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews. He left forty shillings to be distributed among the poor of the parish where he suffered, and eighteen shillings and sixpence only to his wife. This note is taken by Granger, from a relation that I have not as yet seen.

I, that have robb'd so oft, am now bid stand,
Death and the law assault me, and demand
My life and means ! I never us'd men so,
But, having ta'en their money, let them go ;
Yet must I die ! and is there no relief ?
The king of kings took mercy on a thief !
So may my gracious king, in mercy, save me,
Although grim death and law do thus outbrave me.
God is his precedent, and men shall see
His mercy is beyond severity."

He was condemned, with others, his associates ; but pardon-ed, at the intercession of the queen ; in grateful return for which benignity, he address'd these not inelegant lines.

" To her never to be equalled Majesty, the Queen of Great-Britain, &c.

He remained, however, a conſiderable time in confinement ;
 during which, he addreſſed a copy of verſes to the king, praying for his liberty, with this promiſed reſolution, on receiving it.

 Whilſt theſe your wars endure, ev'n there to ſpend
 My time, in that brave ſervice.

After he had regained his liberty, he addressed the following lines

" To his honoured Friend, his ever dear and well approved good Uncle, Sir William Clavell, Knight Banneret.

Your hidden purposes, grave sir, that rest
Within the secret closet of your breast,
Have like predomination with my fate ;
I shall be happy, or unfortunate,
As they assign me : you may justly take
A fair occasion, now, both to forsake,
And utterly renounce me ; but behold,
My God above (whose secrets are untold ;
All things on earth, as he thinks best decreeing,
What will my future actions be, foreseeing,)
Hath lent me life and mercy, by my king,
Who is his substitute in ev'ry thing.
Since, then, their doom is past, Oh ! let not me
Be new arraign'd by your severity.
Forget my foul offences, me and all,
Until some brave and noble actions shall
Bring you a-new acquainted. If again
I ever take a course that shall be vain,
Or, if of any ill I faulty be,
O then, for ever, disinheret me.

Your right sorrowful Nephew,

JOHN CLAVELL."

These, and the foregoing verses, with many other addressees, in prose and verse, to the king, nobility, judges, magistrates, clergy, &c. are prefixed to a poem of considerable length, written by him, during his confinement, of which the following is the title.

" A Recantation of an ill-led Life : Or, a Discovery of the Highway Law. With vehement Disswasions to all (in that kind) Offenders. As also, many cautelous Admonitions, and full

The preface to which is dated, "From my lonely, sad, and unfrequented chamber, in the King's Bench, Oct. 1627."

The epistle from "The Stationer to the Buyer," prefixed to the third edition, 4to. 1634, concludes thus—"the late, and general, false report of his (Clavell's) relapse, and untoward death, made me most willing, again, to publish this work of his, to let you know, he not only lives, but hath also made good all those his promises, and strict resolutions; insomuch, that it is become very disputable amongst wise men, whether they should more admire his former ill ways, or his now most singular reformation, whereat no man out-joys his friend, and your's,

RICHARD MEIGHEN."

The following extract from Clavell's preface to his "Recantation," while it serves as a specimen of his prose, will account to the reader for his writing and publishing it.

"The liveliest and best monuments of men are their actions, and in those, their memories either die before them, in infancy, or survive them unto the farthest extent of perpetuity, in the fullest and fairest registers of time and glory; both of these retain their subsistences, not in the brazen leaves of sepulchres, nor in the tongue-failing relation of succession; but in those paper records, which seldom forfeit them to loss, although assaulted by never so many alterations: as the stories from the first world, as well profane as divine, may wonderfully witness to all observers. This truth may question my discretion, that have made mine own hand the character rafter of fuch actions as pofterity will blufh at; whole memory might eafily have loft the thoughts of men in lefs than half an age, if thus I had not given it continuance, as lafting as the world. It is confeft, in refpect of myfelf, the answer is difficult; but, in refpect of God, the world, and mine own confcience, I could contrive no fairer, or more real fatisfaction. The fins of the deareft children of God have had their like punifhments; David's murther and adultery muft have David's written confeffion and contrition: Solomon's lafciviousnefs muft have his own acknowledgment and recantation; and, to conclude, he that is afhamed to confeft the ills that he has been confcious of, argues too palpably that he is a great many leagues from repentance; and is more in love with his fin, than his amendment. Believe in charity, this is my refolution; that mine own free detection of this pernicious and common vice might not only kill the fear of my impoffible relapses, but be a juft deterrer of all the worfhipers of this courfe; whilst I fhall be happy to be either censured, or forgotten, by them for whole amendment I owe my prayers; and will religiously invoke, that they may either becoome new men, like me, or elfe that they may know my refolution hath built me beyond the afperfions of their poifons."

It is apparent that this man merited the favour he received; and, probably, performed gallant fervice to his merciful Prince: may no ftain, therefore, remain upon his memory, for his former misdeeds; but, rather, may he be held up to the frail part of pofterity, as an example worthy every ill man's imitation.

We read of ftrange effects which the violent death of Charles I. had upon many of his adherents, and well-wifhers; if Clavell furvived his fovereign, what muft have been his feelings, when he knew the Saviour of his life wanted that mercy, he had formerly fhewn to him!

P I R

PIRATES.

None of the bold adventurers were ever so much talked of in Europe, as Captain Avery: he was represented to have raised himself to the dignity of a King, and likely to have founded a new monarchy, having, as it was said, taken great riches, and married the Great Mogul's daughter. He was a west countryman. After innumerable piratical robberies, he found his way to England, changed his name, and lived at Biddeford in Devonshire.

Captain Martel, a pirate, who flourished after the peace of Utrecht; after various success for some few years, his ship was burnt, and he and his companions, escaping to a wood in one of the islands, were never heard of afterwards.

Captain Teach, alias Blackbeard, was a Bristol man, and distinguished himself in a privateer, in the beginning of the eighteenth century; he was killed in an engagement, after committing depredations as a pirate on the American trade for many years.

About the same time flourished Major Stede Bonnet, and Captain Edward England.

Captain Charles Vane, one of the pirates who stole away the silver, which the Spaniards had fished up from the galleons in the Gulph of Florida, and was at Providence when governor Rogers came to those parts, who pardoned all that colony of rogues, except Captain Vane and his crew.

Captain John Rackham, who was quarter-master in Vane's company.

Mary Read, J. Anne Bonney, two women pirates, who flourished about the same time.

Captain Howel Davis, was one of Captain England's crew.

Captain Barthol. Roberts flourished about 1719.

Captain Anstis flourished about 1718.

Captain Worley, chief of a most resolute crew.

Captain George Lowther, a most noted pirate, flourished till they were taken by the Eagle sloop, in 1722, but Lowther, and some of his men escaped on an island.

Captain

P I R

Captain Edward Lowe, was born at Westminster, 1724, a most noted depredator at this time.

Captain John Evans, a Welchman, flourished about the same time, as did Captain John Philips, who commanded the Revenge.

Philip Roach, an Irishman, and his company, made a great figure for a little time, but being young men, they were soon taken. Captain Sprig was a companion in iniquity with Lowe and Hawkins.

Captain John Gows (alias Smith) was executed with his companions; and about the same time, Captain Brigstock and William Ingram.

John Upton, a famous pirate, executed 1729, aged 50; he was a native of Deptford.

Captain Morgan, commonly called Sir Henry, flourished about the time of Charles II.

This most infamous of all pirates, was the son of a substantial yeoman in Wales. His inclination leading him early to sea, he entered into the service of a master of a vessel bound for Barbadoes, who treacherously sold him soon after he landed on that shore. When he had obtained his liberty, he went to Jamaica to seek his fortune. Here he fell in with some free-booters, and entered on board one of their ships; and having displayed his courage on several occasions, he in a short time became a Captain. He was afterwards Vice-Admiral under Manwell, an old pirate of prime notoriety, who died soon after he engaged himself in his service. If the courage of Morgan had been properly directed, it would have done him the greatest honour: it was, perhaps, not inferior to that of Monk or Rupert; and several of his stratagems were as extraordinary as his courage. But he was rapacious, cruel, and debauched; in the same degree that he was valiant. The cruelties exercised on the Indians by the Spaniards, were not equal to what that people suffered by his orders, to make them discover their hidden treasures.

THI

THIEVES. The most famous of this country, were Arthur Chambers, who was a great proficient in coining and classing the canting language; which he would impudently assert, was the purest Greek in the world. He was one of the most early utterers of base money in this country, and was a great adept in picking pockets. He made an exit of his ill spent life at Tyburn.

Colonel Jack, famous for his various turns of fortune: he was a footpad, pickpocket, shoplifter, and an adept in every species of low villainy: he was transported to America, was reformed, and became a worthy member of society.

Jack Bird, the famous footpad, flourished about the same time.

Simon Fletcher, a famous pickpocket of approved abilities, hanged in 1692, aged 53. He was supposed to be the greatest artist of his age, and captain of all the thieves about London.

Edward and Joan Bracey, proficient in every species of fraud, flourished in 1680.

William Bew, a most notorious highwayman, flourished about the same time; as did Patrick O'Brien, who was executed 1689.

Tom Kelsey, born in Leather-lane, Holborn; a famous housebreaker; who had the impudence to go to Flanders and rob King William's tent. Coming to England, and continuing his practices, he was hanged in 1690.

Nan Hereford, a woman who, in her time, was as famous as any robber we ever heard of. She stole from linen-draper, lacemen, and mercers, as much goods as were supposed to be worth four thousand pounds. She was detected at a linen-draper's shop in Cornhill, as she was securing a piece of muslin, after she had come to the shop in a chair, with three footmen at her heels. She attempted to set Newgate on fire, for which she was heavily fettered and handcuffed: she was executed 1690, aged 28.

Ann

T H I

Ann Holland, a famous thief, whose usual way was, what they call the service lay, by hiring herself into the service of a good family, till she could rob them. Nan Holland could wheedle cunningly; lie confoundedly; swear desperately; pick a pocket dexterously; dissemble without seeming to do so; drink and smoke everlastingly; and brazen out all her actions impudently. She married Wilson, a most famous highwayman; she was executed 1705, cursing the hangman.

Ann Harris (alias Sarah Davis, alias Thorne, alias Gotterne), was a most notorious shoplifter, and flourished a great while: she begun a child, and was hung at the age of twenty years.

Jack Shepherd, a most notorious thief, who several times broke out of prison, and had his hands and feet so completely at command, that he could contract them, so as to withdraw them from his fetters: he flourished in the time of Jonathan Wild. One of the most singular proficient in every species of thieving and cheating, in the last century, was

Mary Frith, or Moll Cut-purse, a woman of a masculine spirit and make, who was commonly supposed to have been an hermaphrodite, practised, or was instrumental to, almost every crime, and wild frolick, which is notorious in the most abandoned, and eccentric of both sexes. She was infamous as a prostitute and procuress, a fortune-teller, a pick-pocket, a thief, and a receiver of stolen goods;* she was also concerned with a dexterous scribe in forging hands. Her most signal exploit was robbing General Fairfax, upon Hounslow Heath, for which she was sent to Newgate; but was, by proper application of a large sum of money, soon

* She made this trade very advantageous, having acted much upon the same plan that Jonathan Wild did, in the reign of George I. keeping a correspondence with most thieves of that time; and was particularly intimate with Mull-Sack, a well-known chimney-sweeper and thief; who once left her in pawn for a considerable tavern reckoning; from which time she dropped his acquaintance.

set at liberty. She well knew, like other robbers, in high life, how to make the produce of her accumulated crimes the means of her protection, and to live luxuriously upon the spoils of the public. She died of the dropsy, in the 75th year of her age, but would probably have died sooner, if she had not smoked tobacco; in the frequent use of which she long indulged herself. It was, at this time, almost as rare a sight to see a woman with a pipe, as to see one of the sex in man's apparel. Nat. Field, in his comedy, called "Amends for the Ladies," has displayed some of the merry pranks of Moll Cut-purse. She is also mentioned by Butler and Swift, in the following lines:

" He Trulla lov'd, Trulla more bright
 " Than burnish'd armour of her Knight;
 " A bold Virago, stout and tall,
 " As Joan of France, or English Mall.*

* A contraction of Mary; it is still used in the west, among the common people. Hence it derived the diminutive Malkin, or Mawkin (a kind of loose mop, made of clouts, for sweeping the oven), a term often applied to a dirty flatteringly wench; but it originally signifies no more than Little Moll.

† It is well known, that Jonathan Wild used to equip his emissaries with genteel dresses, and send them to church, or any other place where he had reason to believe there would be a crowd. The greatest booty that they are supposed to have gained for him, in one day, was at an installation at Windfor, where

In the time of James I. flourished the following character. Mulled Sack, a fantastic and humourous chimney sweeper, so called. He is in a cap and feather, and laced band: his cloak is tucked up, and coat ragged; he has a scarf on his arm; on his left leg is a fashionable boot, with a spur; on his right foot is a shoe with a rose: he has a sword by his side, and a holly bush and pole on his shoulder; in his left hand is another pole with a horn on it: a pipe, out of which issues smoke, is in his right hand.* At the bottom are the following lines.

I walke the Strand and Westminster, and scorne
To march i' the cittie, though I bear the horne.
My feather and my yellow band accord
To prove me courtier; my boote, spur, and sword,
My smoking pipe, scarf, garter, rose on shoe,
Shew my brave mind t'affect what gallants doe.
I sing, dance, drink, and merrily passe the day,
And like a chimney sweepe all care away.

I never saw this print but in a very curious and valuable volume of English portraits by the old engravers, collected in the reign of Charles I. and now in the possession of John Delabere, Esq. of Cheltenham, in Gloucestershire.

where they handed and assisted the ladies in the throng, and robbed them of their watches and diamond girdle buckles. Some of these fellows, especially such as wore red coats and laced hats, were soon observed to assume great airs, and fancy themselves as good gentlemen as Jonathan himself. Hence it was, that they were very shortly brought to the gallows. One would imagine, that this arch-thief had been informed of the practice of Eutrapelus:

— Cuicunque nocere volebat
Vestimenta dabat pretiosa. HOR.

* This medley of the dress of the man of fashion and the chimney-sweeper, is not unlike that which Laffels mentions in his "Voyage of Italy," where he describes a carnival at Rome. "But never," says the author, "did any mas-
"carade please like that speculative Italian, who mocked both the French
"and the Spaniards at once, by walking up and downe the street, clad half
"like a Don, and half like a Monsieur," &c. Laffel's "Voyage," part ii.

FLASH SONGS.

KING of the GIPSIES SONG, made upon his Beloved DOXY, or MISTRESS.

- DOXY! thy glaziers shine,
As glimmer by the Solomon,
No gentry mort hath parts like thine,
No cove e'er wap'd with such a one.
2. White thy fambles, red thy gan.
And thy quarrons dainty is ;
Couch a hogthead with me then,
And the darkman's clip and kifs.
3. What tho' I no togeman wear,
Nor commission, mish, or slate ;
Store of strammel we'll have here,
And ith' skipper lib in state.
4. Wapping thou I know does love,
Also the ruffin cly the mort ;
From thy Stamper then remove
The drawers, and let us prin in sport.
5. When the lightman up does call,
Margery Prater from her nest ;
And her cackling cheats withal,
In a boozing ken we'll feast.
6. There if lour we want, I'll milk
A gage, or nip from thee a bung :
Rumbooze thou shalt booze thy fill,
And crash a grunting cheat that's young.

The RUM MORT'S SONG.

1. NOW my kinching-cove is gone,
By the rum-pad maundeth none,
I quorrans both for stump and bone,
Like any clapperdogeon.
2. Dimber damber fare the well,
Pai-lards all thou didst excel,
And thy jockum bore the bell,
Glimmer on it never fell.
3. Thou the crange ne'er did scowre,
Harmans had on thee no power,
Harmanbecks did never tour,
For the drawers still had lour.
4. Duds and cheats thou oft has won,
Yet the coffin quire could shun ;
And the Deaufaville did'st run,
Else the cheats had the undone.
5. Crank and Dummerar thou could'st play,
Or run mauder in one day ;
And like an abram-cove could'st pray,
Yet pass with gibes well jerk away.
6. When the darkman's have been wet,
Tho' the crackman's down didst beat
For glimmer, whilst a quacking-cheat,
Or rib o'th' buttery was our meat.
7. Red-shaks then I could lack,
Ruff-peck still hung on my back,
Crannam ever fill'd my sack,
With lap and poplats held jack.
8. To thy bugher and thy skew,
Filch and gibes I bid adieu ;
Tho' the togeman was not new,
In it, the rogue to me was true.

The BUDGE's SONG;

In CANT.

1. THE Budge it is a delicate trade,
And delicate trade of fame,
For when that we have bit the blow,
We carry away the game;
But if the cully nap us,
And the luries from us take,
O then he rub us to the whit,
Though we are not worth a make.

2. And when that we come to the whit,
Our darbies to behold;
And for to do our penance there
We booze the water cold:
But when that we come out again,
And the merry hick we meet,
We file off with his cole,
As he pikes along the street.

3. And when that we have fil'd him,
Perhaps of half a job;
Then every man to his boozing ken,
O there to fence his hog:
But if the cully nap us,
And once again we get
Into the cramping-rings,
' To scour them in the whit.

4. Our

CANT SONGS, &c.

4. Our fortune soon is told us then,
Unto our sorrow great ;
O we are doom'd by the red gown-men,
To die at the nubbing-cheat.
Then every man with his mort in his hand,
Does booze off his cag, and part,
With a kiss we part, and westward stand,
To the nubbing cheat in a cart.
5. And when we come to the nubbing cheat,
For rubbing on the budge ;
There stands Jack Ketch, that son of a bitch,
That owes us all a grudge :
For when that he has nub'd us,
And our friends tip him no cole,
He takes his chive and cuts us down,
And tips us into a hole.

The BLACK PROFESSION:

A SONG.

GOOD people, give ear, whilst a story I tell,
Of twenty black tradesmen who were brought up in hell,
On purpose poor people to rob of their due,
There's none shall be nooz'd if you find but one true.
The first was a coiner that stamp'd in a mold,
The second a voucher to put off his gold :
Mark you well, hark you well,
See where they're rubb'd,
Up to the nubbing-cheat, and there they're nub'd.

The third was a padder that fell to decay,
And when he was living, took to the highway.
The fourth is a milken, to crack up a door,
He'll venture to rob both the rich and the poor.

The

CANT SONGS, &c.

The fifth is a glazier, who when he creeps in,
To pinch all the Lurry he thinks it no fin.

Mark you well, &c.

The sixth is a file coy, that not one hick spares,
The seventh is a budge, to trip up the stairs.
The eighth is a bulk, that can bulk and hick,
If the master be napp'd, then the bulk he is sick.
The ninth is a ginny, to lift up the grate,
If he sees but the lurry, with his hooks he will bait.

Mark you well, &c.

The tenth is a shop-lift, who carries a bob,
When she rangeth the city, the shops for to rob.
The eleventh is a bubber, much used of late,
He goes to an alehouse and steals thence a plate.
The twelfth a trapan, if a cully he does meet,
He nips all his lour, and turns him i'the street.

Mark you well, &c.

The thirteenth a fambler, false rings for to sell,
When a mob he has bit, his cole he will tell.
The fourteenth a gamester, if he sees the hick sweet,
He presently drops down a cog in the street.
The fifteenth a prancer whose courage is small,
If they catch him horse stealing, he's noos'd for all.

Mark you well, &c.

The sixteenth a sheep-napper, whose trade is so deep,
If he's caught in the corn, he's mark'd for a sheep.
The seventeenth a dunakar, that will make vows
To go into the country to steal all the cows.
The eighteenth a kid-napper, who spirits young men,
Tho' he tips them the pikes, they nig him again.

Mark you well, &c.

The

CANT SONGS, &c.

The nineteenth is a prigger of canklets in storms,
Goes to the country to visit the farms,
He steals there the poultry, and thinks it no sin,
When in the henroost i'th night he gets in.
The twentieth a thief-taker, so we him call,
If he haps a poor tradesmen, he makes him pay all.

A S O N G.

THERE is a black and sullen hour,
Which fate decreed our life shou'd know :
Lest we should slight Almighty pow'r,
Rapt with the joys we find below.
'Tis past, dear Cynthia ! now let frowns begone,
For crimes alas ! to me unknown.

In such soft hour of silent night,
Your image in a dream appears ;
I grasp the soul of my delight,
Slumber in joy, but wake in-tears.
Ah ! faithless, charming faint, what will you do ?
Let me not think I am by you,
Lov'd worse, lov'd worse, for being true.
